WHAT DID MEDIEVAL PHILOSOPHY DO FOR US?
CROSS-DISCIPLINARY ENTANGLEMENTS
A ROUND TABLE DISCUSSION

Sponsor: IPM Monthly

What is the point of studying medieval philosophy? At first sight, its direct impact on other disciplines seems to be negligible. Indeed, how can the clarification of abstruse interpretative frameworks written centuries ago contribute to historical reconstructions of the past or even contemporary philosophical debate? This round table discussion will discuss the interdisciplinary value of medieval philosophy for contemporary scholarship as mirrored by the structural entanglement on which the notion of philosophia was grounded. By contrasting how disciplines like cultural history, history of science, and literature deal with medieval philosophical theories, the round table will shed light on and deconstruct long-lasting biases against medieval philosophy and its supposed uselessness.

Participants: GRÉGORY CLESSE, MÁRIO JOÃO CORREIA, Yael KEDAR, JONATHAN MORTON, PAULA OLIVEIRA E SILVA, AND NICOLA POLLONI.

Moderator: MARIA EDUARDA MACHADO
